"I didn't have much luck in the legislature," sighed an aspiring young man who is now in the insurance business. "That old Skinley from the Hawbush district kept ripping me up every move I made. I wanted to go at him hammer and tongs, but he never appeared to know that there was such a member as I. He never used my name when speaking, never looked at me and never openly opposed any of my bills. But every time I bobbed up he knocked it to me. When I introduced my bill to do away with high hats in the theater, he offered one making it a misdemeanor for a woman over 15 years of age to appear bareheaded in any place of public amusement. The only way of keeping even was by dropping both of these proposed measures.

"Having a large prohibition constituency, I offered a bill in which a penalty was fixed for selling or drinking any malt or spirituous liquors except under certain restrictions which would make it impossible to maintain saloons. Old Skinley at once prepared and presented a measure making it a crime for any man, woman or child to have or to indulge a thirst for any thing stronger than tea, coffee, water, milk or what are commonly known as soft drinks. I was laughed off the floor when I attempted to urge my bill.

"When I offered a bill forbidding any person to marry before he or she had attained the age of 21, Skinley was soon on deck with another bill prohibiting any young man or woman from falling in love without first procuring a license from the clerk. That's the way the fellow squelched me at every turn. You can read my legislative record on a sheet of blank paper, and that's why I'm out of politics. But if Skinley ever comes up again just watch my smoke."—Detroit Free Press.

The town of Mauckport, O. has a very queer family. It consists of Mrs. Anna Nickum, a widow and eleven children. She is 68 years old, and 52 of these years have been spent in bed. She lost the use of her lower limbs at 16. She was at this time engaged to be married and was married, thinking that she would recover. But the use of her limbs never returned, and she has been in bed ever since. Eleven children has been born unto her and she has nursed all of them as well as any mother can.

London, England was visited last week by the largest fire for more than four centuries. The fire started near the site where the great conflagration of 1666 originated, and raged for five hours. The loss is estimated at $20,000,000 to $30,000,000, 150 valuable warehouses, a number of business blocks and a few dwellings being burned. No loss of life was reported. The fire is thought to have originated from an explosion of gas due to search for a leak that was being made by a naked lamp in an umbrella makers shop. An area of about seven acres was swept by the flames.

Mr. Bryan tells a good story the expense of the Palmer and Buckner Democrats: A traveling man on a Missouri train said that he could tell by the looks of the passengers what political party they belonged to. "This man here," "is a Republican." "Yes," said the passenger, "that is my politics." That man over there is a Democrat. "That is correct," responded the second passenger. "That man in the third seat is a Populist." "Correct you are," said the Populist. "And that man further on is a gold standard democrat." "No I am not," promptly responded the fellow. ### What they say about us.

The Spoutspring Times, owned and edited for some time by J. E. Burgher, has been leased by C. P. McIntosh, of that little city, and judging from the appearance of the little sheet, Mr. McIntosh will certainly make a success of it. It is well edited and newsy, and the citizens of Estill county should give it a liberal support.—Campton Banner.

All persons have something to be thankful for:

Life, health, freedom and happiness, are a few of the many blessings bestowed upon us by our Creator.

A flouring mill is wanted at Spoutspring. There is a chance for some enterprising person to establish a paying plant of that kind here. There are many acres of good wheat land in this and the surrounding counties that are lying idle or used for less paying crops that would be used for growing wheat if a mill was in easy reach. Spoutspring has more advantages for a plant of this kind than any other town in this or any of the adjoining counties. The town is situated near a railroad and all public roads leading here are excellent, there is an inexhaustible supply of water, the Spoutspring from which the town derives its name is an ever flowing fountain of the purest water and in sufficient quantity to supply a large flouring mill. There are many other inducements not mentioned here.

Persons having the "dough" should take the hint and establish a flouring mill plant here, it would be a good investment for any one having the means.

A Choctaw editor gets off the following, which is undoubtedly true: "Any man that would keep a dog that would jump a fence and break a rail and scare a mule that would throw a negro and break a jug of whiskey in a dry country, has but little chance for forgiveness."

When a preacher begins to fight the devil over the shoulders of his congregation some will take his remarks to themselves and refuse to contribute to his salary. The editor is placed in the same boat as the preacher. Let the editor say one word against the evil conduct of the world, and the guilty subscriber will take it to himself, get hot under the collar, swear that every body knows it is him, and then stop the paper. The poor editor, in making the item a personal thrust, is thus abused and made to go hungry for doing just what the preacher does every Sunday.—Corbin News.
